We need adults committed to being on a roster to run the Children's Liturgy. There will be training and support.

If your child has received their First Holy Communion and would like to become an Altar server committing to a regular roster we would love to hear from you. The children will receive training in the ministry.

REFLECTION

"The man on whom you see the Spirit come down and rest."

When the musical Jesus Christ Superstar was revived for a theatrical performance in London, posters to advertise the play were put up in the West End, the major commercial and theatrical area of the city. They showed street scenes of crowds walking through the busy streets of London, but, in each picture, highlighted a particular face. The face was one of the stars of the production. Without the highlighting, you would not have noticed that one person among the throng of people.

What was it that John the Baptist saw in Jesus that told him that this was the one he was waiting for? It wasn't the dove which appeared above him at his baptism, since this would not look remarkable without that special insight that was given to John. However this insight worked, it was sufficient for the disciples who could see that John could see. It is good for us to remember that there are no unimportant people in the crowds that surround us. Each one has a special gift from God, if we could see.

When Christ came into the world, he gave us power to be responsible for that world. He, as the prophet Isaiah foretold, was to be the light of the nations, his salvation was to reach to the ends of the earth. Yet he shares this ministry with us. We can think of the humanity of Jesus, his soul and body, as a sort of instrument. This is not a denial of the incarnation, because God the Son uses that humanity to be himself, and he will never lay down that instrument. We too becomes instruments of God through the humanity of Jesus. We are the brothers and sisters of the one who is God and still human.

All human beings have to work through others. Great music, art and writings only exist if they are appreciated and received by other human beings. Christ wishes to be received into our hearts, so that his love and redemption can be worked for the world. This places an immense responsibility on us, but even though we are inadequate instruments, it is the skill of God in using us as instruments that we are to rely on, not our own strength. Look at Jesus, and let him enter.

Stand in a city street, anywhere in the world, and there will be so many people passing by. Most of them we will not know, but occasionally there will be a face in the crowd we recognise. Perhaps someone we know, perhaps someone we merely know about. Those faces stand out. Yet every one of the faces of the people who flow by us in the great river of souls is known to God. We can't know very many people in this life, and even the ones we do know, we don't always know very well. We know their habits, can get to be good at knowing what they will say, how they will react to a particular event. Yet it is all superficial. We don't really know people because we don't really know ourselves. It is the one face in the crowd that helps us to connect to the many, to the countless lives that have been or will be lived in this earth.

John the Baptist lived a solitary life. He had his disciples, he spoke to the crowds of people, but he was apart. He waited for the coming of the Christ because only through him could he connect. Peter and the other apostles followed Jesus out of the crowd and they would come to know some unexpected individuals in their lives as they followed Jesus. They would speak to Roman governors, soldiers, leaders of foreign synagogues, and great thinkers, but it would always be one to one. We cannot see humanity as a whole and so we can only know a few in our lives. Yet in prayer and the sacraments, we can touch all the faces of humanity. The Eucharist is the sign of how Christ united himself to every human being on earth. He offers himself to the world, and he is present to all who pray, not just in his divinity but in his humanity. His human presence is extended to the many, and so in heaven will our humanity be extended.
